Using My Voice

Using your voice means finding the courage to speak up, share your experiences and contribute to conversations that matter, whether through art, writing, public speaking or everyday moments with others. It is about asserting who you are while staying open to listening and learning from those around you, a vital tool for personal empowerment and for building a stronger community. Every child has the right to be heard and to have their views taken seriously, and this week we put that into practice.

We relaunch the Whitehall Collective, our inclusive alternative to a traditional school council, open to every pupil rather than a select few, so that a genuine cross-section of voices shapes decisions across our school. We also introduce our new Eco Council, giving pupils real influence over how we care for our school and our environment. Every class will explore what it means to lead through a P4C discussion on leadership, developing the confidence, responsibility and active citizenship that prepare pupils for life beyond school.
